

MAKE YOUR OWN BUNTING

Simply decorate your bunting using a variety of materials in red, white and blue. Use the flag to copy the colours

Cut out the bunting once decorated and fold the flap over the string to make bunting

Adult help and supervision maybe required when completing this activity. Never leave a child alone with a pair of scissors

JUBILEE ACTIVITY BOX

Celebrating by making homemade decorations is one step closer to winning the battle with plastic. Everything in the box is re-usable and recyclable – so the fun never stops!

Our Jubilee Activity Box has more activities to go on an educational learning journey this bank holiday

Enter our competition to win a trip to London

WHY DO WE HAVE BUNTING ?

What is bunting?

Bunting is a long line of flags put out on occasions to celebrate an event, such as a birthday party, wedding or street party.

Why do we have it?

Bunting originated in the 17th Century when the Navy put out flags on the ships. Over the years bunting has been strung as a form of decoration to mark occasions such as VE Day, the Queen's various Jubilees and Royal weddings

Why do we have street parties?

Street Parties were first organised in 1919, known as 'peace teas' for children after the 1st World War. Street parties evolved over time and included bunting decorations, tea parties and parades. Today, street parties are held for all ages to bring together communities in the street where you live.

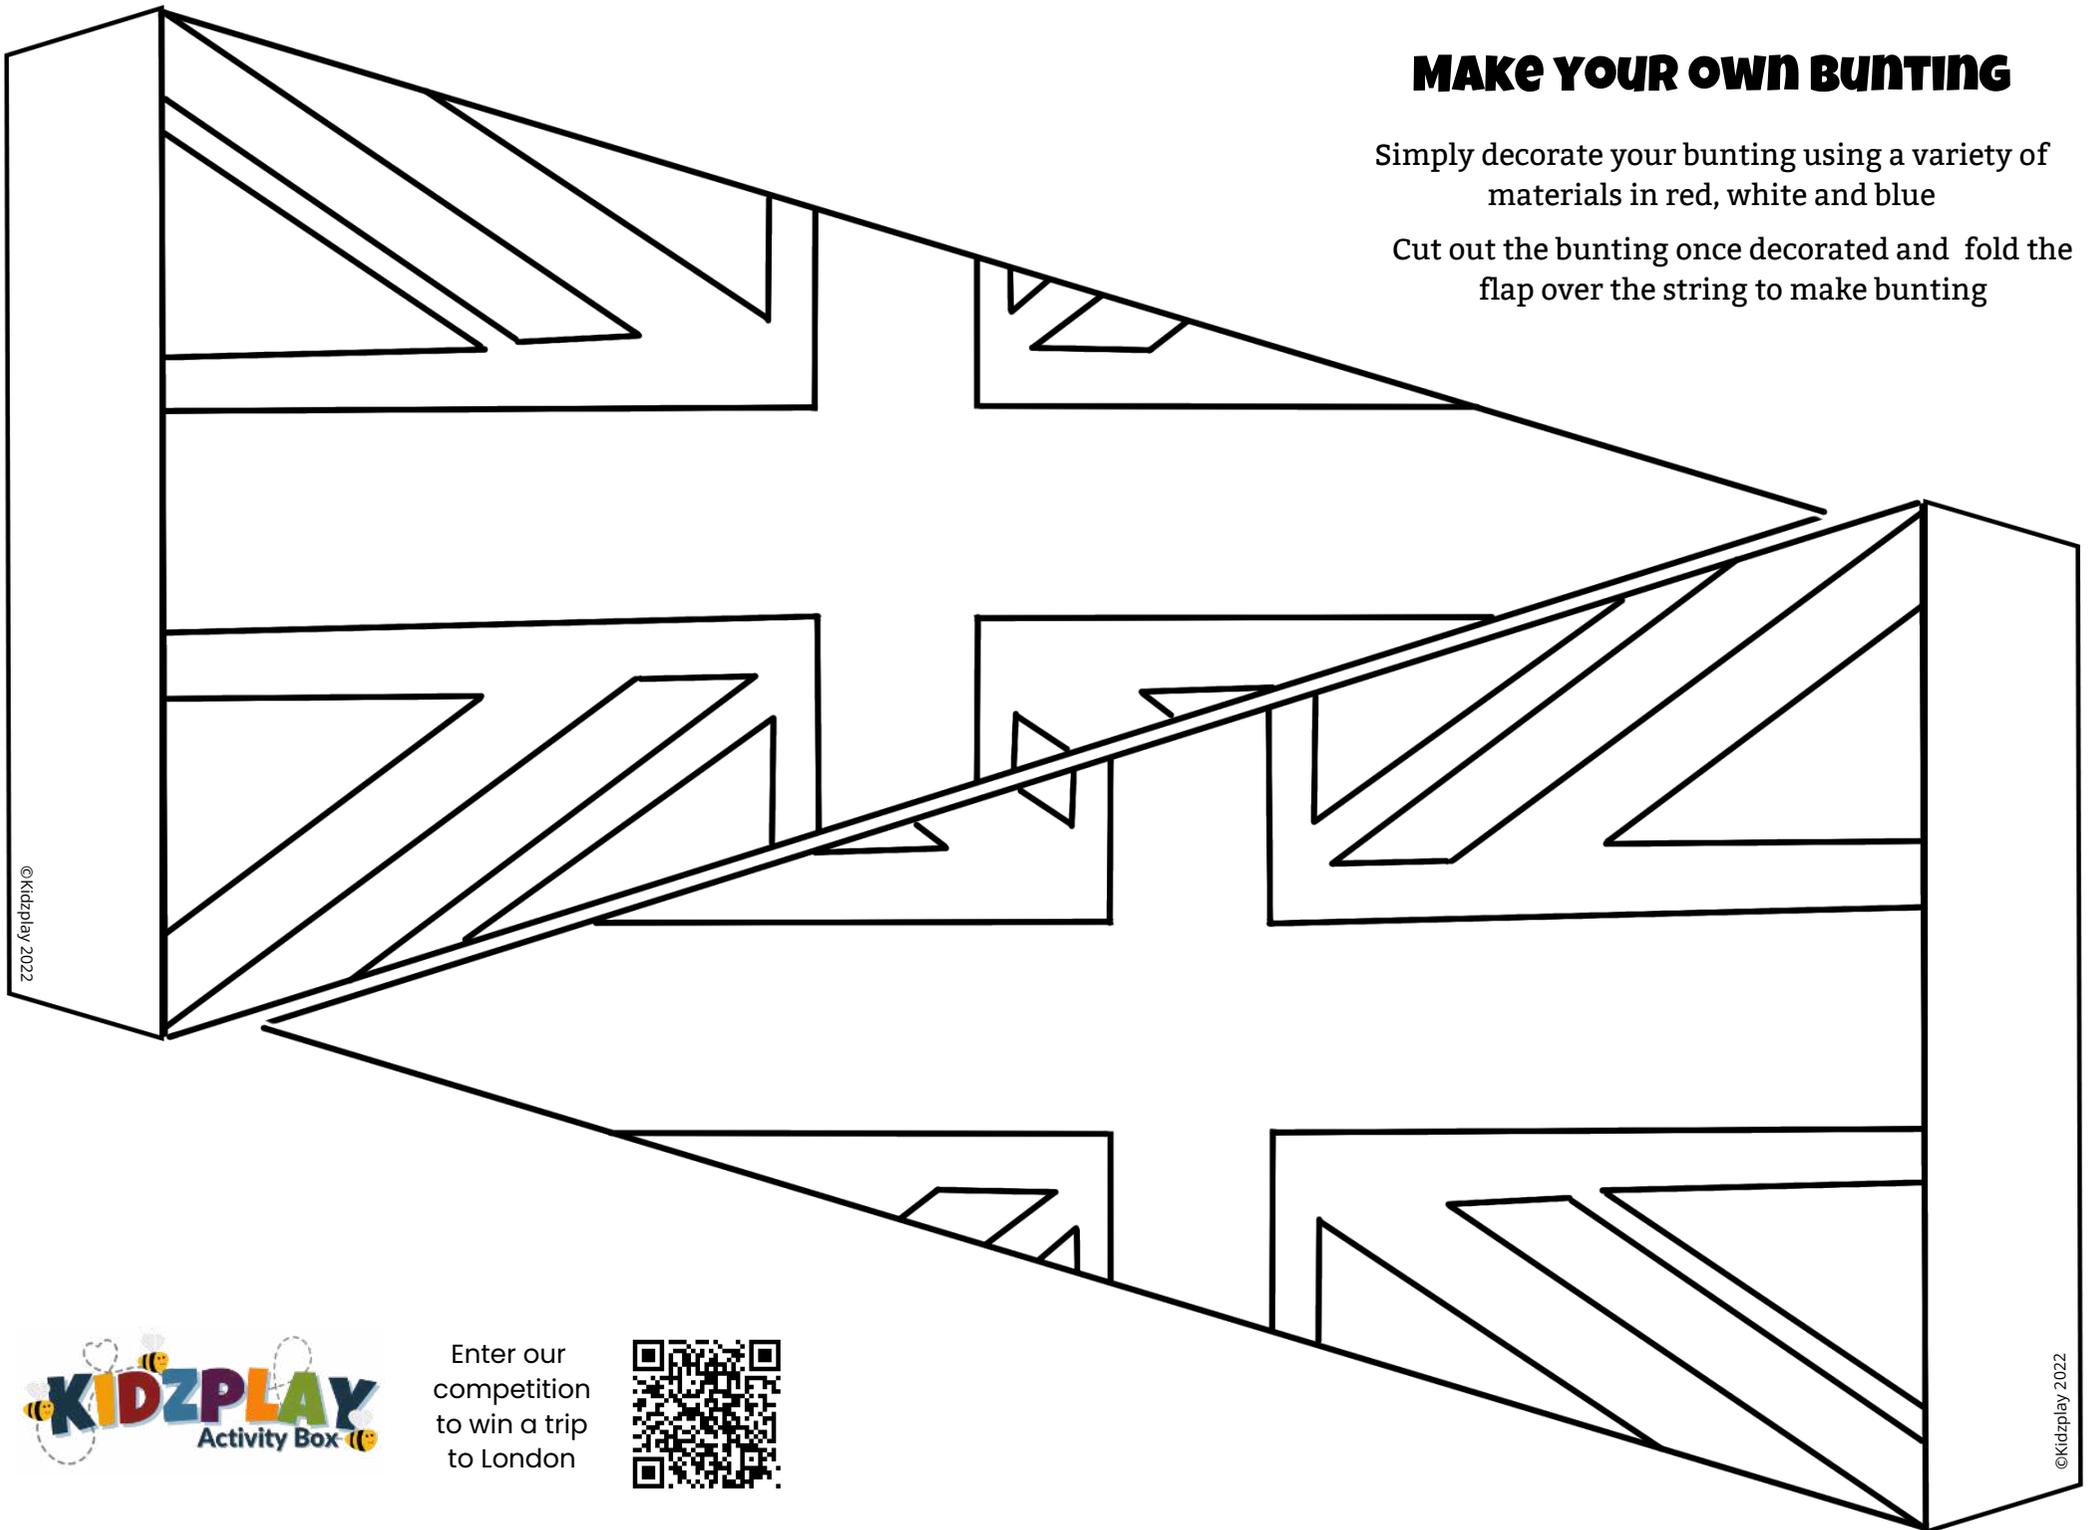

Let's celebrate the Queen's Platinum Jubilee by making our own bunting!

MAKE YOUR OWN BUNTING

Simply decorate your bunting using a variety of materials in red, white and blue

Cut out the bunting once decorated and fold the flap over the string to make bunting

©Kidzplay 2022

©Kidzplay 2022

Enter our competition to win a trip to London

